1. FOREWORD

As parents, we want our children to excel and indeed be the best that they can be, given their gifts and temperament. However, the part that parents can play towards this achievement is something limited by careers and other commitments.

Yet, the early childhood days are the most critical in a child's development of character and feelings of security and love.

We endeavor to establish a creative environment whereby both the occupation and education of children are achieved during this crucial stage, in terms of physical, intellectual, emotional and social development.

Together, as parents and educators, let us work towards our common goal of an enjoyable and enriching childhood for our children.

2. OUR VISION AND MISSION

5. OUR CURRICULUM

DC Child Care and Education Centre run an integrated programme organised by “Themes” in which learning is through interdisciplinary activities. Integrated learning experiences help children make meaningful connections across learning areas and enable them to understand how knowledge and skills are linked. Our teachers provide meaningful content and context for learning based on the children’s culture, interests and shared experiences.

The key knowledge skills and dispositions in our curriculum reflect a continuum of learning and development across different age groups for each learning area.

(a) LANGUAGE AND LITERACY (English and Bengali)

Language and literacy is very important for children’s development in thinking and learning. Children need to use language not only to express their needs, feelings and thoughts, but also to make sense of what adults want them to do. They need language to communicate with others in order to participate in society. Such needs can be met with the guidance and support their vocabulary and engage them in meaningful and purposeful conversation. Our teachers play a vital role in children's language development as learners of a language need as much practice as possible in listening to and conversing with role models. The teacher and children are always engaged with each other.

- Valuing children's talk by taking time to listen and respond
- Stimulating verbal interactions between children
- Encouraging their efforts to use language to record their ideas and thoughts

Our teachers develop children's language and literacy skills through routine, rhymes, songs, language games, fictional role-play, storytelling, shared book reading, word bank, alphabet knowledge activities, word attack, sharing writing.

(b) NUMERACY

Numeracy development involves knowing the concept of numbers and being able to apply this meaningfully in real life situations. Through the use of manipulatives, pictures and symbols, counted, shared and represented. Hence our activities focus on hands-on experiences and the acquisition and use of appropriate language such as position words, number words and names of shapes.

Numeracy experiences build on what children already know. Such experiences provided follow a hierarchical order and include.

- Matching, sorting and comparing
- Ordering and patterning
- Counting and number value
- Shape and spatial awareness
- Simple measurement

For children to become numerate, our curriculum provide opportunities for children to experiences the following processes:

- Problem-solving – explore and think of many ways to solve different kind of problems
- Communication – learn ways to express ideas with words, pictures and symbols as this helps them to clarify their thoughts
- Reasoning – Share their thinking about how they arrived at an answer as reasoning and proof is part of problem-solving

This enhances children's health as well as their mastery of self-help routines in their daily lives.
